BASIC PRINCIPLES of ONCOLOGY

COURSE COORDINATOR: Dr. Fedro A Peccatori

New oncology trainees face a number of challenges, including navigating an extensive curriculum with no clear starting point in a rapidly evolving clinical landscape. This online pathway, conceived by the European School of Oncology, is intended to bridge the gap between courses for medical students and more advanced education for medical oncologists. The track aims to expose young trainees to the basic principles of modern oncologist and to provide orientation to the guiding principles of multidisciplinary oncological management.

The European School of Oncology offers oncology e-learning courses and sessions via e-ESO (www.e-ESO.net), a platform dedicated to providing distance learning material in the form of:

- E-sessions (live and recorded).
- Slides and videos from ESO's events.

The material is divided into three categories:

Recorded

Recorded sessions (past live sessions that have been recorded and can be viewed online).

Slides only

Downloadable PDF presentations from past ESO events.

Future

Future live sessions (scheduled sessions that will be presented live online at an indicated date and time - participants can interact with the speakers during the sessions).

e-ESO sessions are free, educational sessions conducted live on the internet and are offered without any commercial sponsorship. Selected sessions have CME accreditation.

Selected e-ESO educational materials have been organised into PATHWAYS: a series of sessions on a specific topic that provide a general overview. After completing a pathway, the attendee will be able to download a specific certificate of attendance.

Participants are invited to take advantage of the available materials as follows:

- LIVE E-SESSIONS - the details of the live webcasts are indicated in every future session;
- RECORDED SESSION - available sessions enlisted on the site;
- SLIDES - available after an ESO event (depending on permission received from the authors).

Questions can be sent directly to our experts BEFORE, DURING and AFTER the live sessions. Questions received before and during the scheduled e-sessions will be answered during the live session! Questions received after the sessions will be answered by email.

Access to the live session will open 10 minutes before the start of the session directly from the e-ESO website.
